Excerpt: . 5, MY OWN LIFE. In compliance with a request of part, if not all of my family, to leave some memorials of my life, (which I should much more cheerfully undertake, had I spent it to better purposes, and more faithfully in the services of my God, and society both civil and sacred, to which I have long since considered myself inviolably to owe every part of it,) the only query I now have is, whether this will not be deemed useless, or whether it is more innocently spent than in the omission of it. But to begin my life, the scattered scraps of w only memory at rJftsent can collect, having none of the remarks at hand, which I have heretofore incorrectly committed tq paper, which would at least furnish me with dates, and without which I am at a loss...
