Excerpt: . . . thirdly and fourthly, two neighbors, business men like himself, with whom he lived on terms of the friendliest intimacy. That was the party; and the family of Siadoux took especial pains, as the time approached, to provide a supper worthy of the guests, who had all shown the heartiest readiness in accepting their invitations. This was the domestic position, these were the family prospects, on the morning of the twenty-sixth of April--a memorable day, for years afterward, in the village of CroixDaurade. IL THE EVENTS OF THE DAY. Besides the curacy of the village church, good Monsieur Chaubard held some ecclesiastical preferment in the cathedral church of St. Stephen at Toulouse. Early in the forenoon of the twenty-sixth, certain matters connected with this preferment took him from his village curacy to the city--a distance which has been already described as not greater than one French league, or between two and three English miles. After transacting his business, Monsieur Chaubard parted with his clerical brethren, who left him by himself in the sacristy (or vestry) of the church. Before he had quitted the room, in his turn, the beadle entered it, and inquired for the Abbe de Mariotte, one of the officiating priests attached to the cathedral. The Abbe has just gone out, replied Monsieur Chaubard. Who wants him A respectable-looking man, said the beadle. I thought he seemed to be in some distress of mind when he spoke to me. Did he mention his...
