To the extent that commission rates may have declined slightly in recent years, the change may be the result in part of rapidly rising home prices, which have generated higher brokerage industry revenues even with lower commission rates. However, competition from increasing numbers of discount, fee-for-service, and other nontraditional brokerage models may have also contributed to the decline. These nontraditional models typically offer lower fees, and although they currently represent only about 2 percent of the market, they may be putting some downward pressure on the fees charged by traditional brokerages. Factors related to the cooperation among brokers facilitated by MLSs, Certain Factors May Inhibit some brokers resistance to discounters, and consumer attitudes may Price Competition within the real estate brokerage industry. the Real Estate Brokerage Industry While MLSs provide important benefits to consumers by aggregating data Cooperation Facilitated by on homes for sale and facilitating brokers efforts to bring buyers and Multiple Listing...
